Three Amigos meet up in Mexico

SUMMIT Leaders of Canada, the United States and Mexico — also known as “the Three Amigos” — talked about simmering trade issues and the threat from violent drug gangs as they began a summit yesterday.

At the top of their agenda is how to power their economies past a lingering downturn, keep trade flowing smoothly and grapple with Mexican gangs dominating the drug trade over the U.S. border and into Canada. Prime Minister Stephen Harper will continue talks with U.S. President Barack Obama and Mexican President Felipe Calderon today.

Canadian officials are expected to raise concerns about “Buy American” elements of a $787-billion US economic stimulus program they fear could shut out Canadian companies.

Arrested Development's One Love sings at the Edmonton Folk Music Festival yesterday. The afternoon main stage performance at the festival was the group's last Canadian performance of 2009.

Ups and downs of Folk Fest

Arrested Development shine

YURI WUENSCH
for Metro Edmonton

The Edmonton Folk Music Festival law of averages works like this: If you don't like what you're hearing on Stage 1, try Stage 2 instead. If the second stage doesn't sound right, cycle through stages three to six until the main stage opens. If that stinks too, there's always the beer garden (sadly, I am too big for the balloon castle).

While the folk fest has increasingly attempted to diversify its lineup, there were a few misses this year, artistic bombs by anyone's definition. One that sent me packing on Friday night was Raul Malo's trite medley of Guantanamo and Twist and Shout. I don't want to hear that transition from the second-rate keyboard player at my local pub, let alone from a headlining act at an internationally regarded music festival.

Similarly disappointing was Boz Scaggs on Thursday. If Jimmy Buffett wore a turtle neck, he'd probably sound an awful lot like Scaggs. The Wailers? Solid if not by the numbers, at the risk of alienating all you “reggae” fans who have a copy of Bob Marley's Legend on your iPod.

There were triumphs this weekend, though.

Arrested Development and the scintillating Sharon Jones and the Dap Kings, to name but two. On Sunday afternoon, I also managed to hear Linda Tillery & the Cultural Heritage Choir laying down a mean version of Mustang Sally on a workshop stage. Edmonton funk fest? Sign me up.

Other festival winners include Nova Scotia charmer Joel Plaskett who, along with his dad, Bill, managed to take issues with sound levels and funnily make them become part of his set's narrative. Equally winning were the duo of Gurf Morlix and Sam Baker, who, between singing dusty old songs about Texas, told some of the worst knee-slappers imaginable. Rousing stuff.

Like beer-weary trips on the Gallagher Park hillside, the 30th-annual folk fest had its ups and downs. And with it ending, I'm a little saddened — and already looking forward to next year.

Teenager charged after taxi driver stabbed twice

VICTORIA HANDYSIDES

CRIME A teenager is facing charges following the stabbing of a cab driver over the weekend.

Leduc Mounties rushed to a taxi parked on the roadside north of Nisku near Blackmud Creek around 2:30 a.m. Saturday. The Edmonton driver had been stabbed once in the abdomen and once in the shoulder.

Police gave chase to the suspect, who fled on foot. With the assistance of police dogs and a helicopter, the suspect was found in less than 10 minutes.

Kyle Theodore Ilkiw, 19, was remanded to custody and charged with aggravated assault, assault with a weapon, possession of a dangerous weapon, uttering threats, mischief and possession of a weapon while unauthorized.

“He is definitely known to police in Edmonton,” Leduc RCMP Const. John Powell said.

The driver sustained serious, yet non-life-threatening injuries and was released from hospital yesterday.

Cab driver safety has been under scrutiny over the past year, as the number of driver attacks has continued to rise.

Despite a decision by city council that made pro-TECTIVE shields mandatory, the attacks continue. Nearly a dozen drivers have lost their lives on the job since the '80s.

Powell said none of the attacks, including the most recent, appear to be connected.

Ilkiw makes his first court appearance in Leduc on Thursday.

"This is a place for all anime lovers to congregate," said Nik Ekonomakia, president of the Alberta Association for Asian Popular Arts. "If you walk around, you see a lot of creativity."

The downtown Grant MacEwan Campus served as a playground and meeting spot for anime lovers between Friday and Sunday.

Melissa Dammel, 16, comes from St. Albert every year to share her interests with fellow fans.

"It's like a hobby," Dammel said.

"This Japanese culture is a lot more interesting than anything like pop culture — even if you feel like you don't belong, you do here."

Anime is often viewed as cartoons for kids, Ekonomakia said, but what people don't realize is they're actually great stories ranging from serious dramas to silly comedies.

"It's all about stories," Ekonomakia said. "There are thick graphic novels that go on for years where you can stick with the characters — it is a type of art form."

A number of artist were selling their work, including Ceitlin Hankey, 23, who said she has doubled her profits over what she made last year with her drawings and handmade crafts, including purses.

"Anything is possible when drawing anime," Hankey said. "That's why I love it so much."

This year's attendance was lower than last year's crowd of 4,000, Ekonomakia said, but he added the turnout was still great.

"Our festival used to run from 121 Street and Jasper Avenue, but last year we were told it had to start on 108 Street due to traffic obstruction," Coombs-Montrose said.

"This year was supposed to be the year we were extended back to 121 Street, but we were again told it wasn't possible."

Despite the lack of an expanded area, organizers project this year's event will exceed last year's attendance of 51,000.

PSYCHOLOGY Dog owners, stare deep into the eyes of your fur-covered companion and ask yourself, what do you actually see?

"The big battle is whether they are little people in fur coats or dumb, unfeeling, programmable robots," said Stanley Coren, an expert on dog behaviour and professor of psychology with the University of British Columbia. "The real answer is actually they are ... something in-between."

On Saturday, Coren told the annual American Psychological Association convention in Toronto that cumulative evidence shows a dog's mental abilities resemble those of a two-year-old child. "That means they understand about 165 words and gestures," he said. And while dogs might have the cognitive ability of a toddler, Coren said their social consciousness is as high as an adolescent's.

Premiers urge U.S. governors to reject protectionism

TRADE Urging more free trade with the United States, Canada's premiers are appealing to their American counterparts to reject protectionism.

At the close of the three-day Council of the Federation meeting in Regina, the provincial and territorial leaders vowed to help Ottawa achieve "a broad reciprocal procurement liberalization agreement with the U.S." The premiers' declaration is significant because it comes as Prime Minister Stephen Harper prepares to meet U.S. President Barack Obama in Mexico.

Harper is seeking amendments to the "Buy American" provisions that effectively outlaw Canadian firms from bidding on projects funded by the U.S. stimulus package.

"We're going to have to make this case ... worker to worker, governor to pre-

EU seal ban seen as threat

SEALING Hundreds of villages in Atlantic Canada that depend on seal hunting for much of their livelihood are already feeling a sharp economic pinch from a European ban on seal products that went into effect last month.

For more than 20 years, Eldred Woodford has taken part in the annual seal "harvest" on the ice floes along the coast of Newfoundland and Labrador, home to more than 80 per cent of the country's sealing industry.

But the hunt now brings in much less money than it did only a few years ago, he said. In April, Woodford and his crew killed about 1,200 harp seals over 10 days in an annual hunt that usually accounts for a third of his yearly income.

"When you talk about an income between $30,000 and $35,000 a year and you lose a potential income on sealing of $8,000 to $10,000, that's a substantial loss," said Woodford. REUTERS

U.S. believes Pakistani Taliban leader is dead

TALIBAN The United States said yesterday the evidence was "pretty conclusive" that Pakistani Taliban leader Baitullah Mehsud is dead, while a senior Taliban commander denied reports of infighting among its leaders.

The White House had earlier said it could not confirm the Pakistan government's claims that Mehsud had been killed by a CIA drone.

But asked yesterday if Baitullah had been killed in the attack, national security adviser Jim Jones told NBC's Meet the Press: "We think so. We put it in the 90 per cent category."

"We know that there are some reports now from the Mehsud tribe that he wasn't (killed), but the evidence is pretty conclusive."

The comments add to a volley of unverifiable claims and counter-claims by the Pakistani government and the Taliban that have surrounded the reported death of Mehsud last Wednesday.

Western governments with troops in Afghanistan are watching to see if any new Pakistani Taliban leader would shift focus from fighting the Pakistani government.

More bodies found in Hudson River

Four more bodies were pulled from the Hudson River yesterday and divers searched for the other two victims of a collision between a small plane and a helicopter that killed nine people, including five Italian tourists.

National Transportation Safety Board officials said it was too soon to speculate on what caused Saturday's accident on a clear day over the Hudson River off Manhattan.

Searchers recovered the bulk of the wreckage from the helicopter in which the tourists had embarked on what was to have been a 12-minute flight around Manhattan. Officials said it would be taken to a nearby pier for examination.

"The helicopter sustained significant damage," National Transportation Safety Board chairwoman Debbie Hersman said.

She said seven victims had been recovered and searchers believed they

Within hours of the crash, authorities said there was no hope of finding survivors among the five Italian tourists and a pilot aboard the helicopter and the three people on the plane. Witnesses said the plane, a six-seater Piper Lance operated by Pennsylvania resident Steven Altman, who was killed along with his brother and nephew, appeared to bank sharply before clipping the helicopter. Photographs by witnesses showed one of the plane's wings came off after the collision, as did the helicopter's rotors, before both plunged into the river. Chunks of debris also fell on the New Jersey side of the river in Hoboken.

The crash occurred near the spot where a US Airways jet with more than 150 people on board splashed down in the frigid Hudson River last winter after apparently hitting a flock of geese. All aboard survived. REUTERS

Revolving door of love

HineSight

Anne Hines

metronews.ca/hinesight

Last time, this column was about my friend Rob's new romance. After it ran, a concerned reader sent this tweet:

"Yr column shows a complete lack of faith in yr friend's ability to find true happiness, based on nothing but his entire dating history. Don't u believe in love?"

I was shocked. I had no idea Rob Twittered.

I do believe in love. What I believe is that it falls into two categories — the kind that's guaranteed to last forever and "not so much." The second type may look like this:

1. Puppy Love: This may be defined as any romance involving two people who think the fact that they have the same music on their iPod means they'll "like totally, totally be together forever." Usually, this is limited to the younger than 15-year-old set. I recall my daughter, Becky, then 14, and I having this conversation:

Becky: I'm so upset. Jeremy and I broke up.

Me: (practised at suppressing comments like "Whoohoo!" or "Who's Jeremy?" "Oh my?" "Oh?")

Becky: Now Devon's asked me out. I said I'm just not ready.

Me: You need time to heal ... maybe until you're 40 ...

SunnySide

Becky: I said maybe next weekend.

The reason older, more mature people don't engage in the revolving door romance of youth is obvious. We can't remember that many new names.

2. Beach Vacation Fever.

When the weather's hot, romance sizzles. Scientists claim it's about smell; we can detect the scent of desire on each other. But not through a parka.

Vacation romance, however, is like a sombrero. It's exotic, it's colourful, you have to have it, but bring it home and you'll have no idea what to do with it.

3. Relationships based entirely on looks. No good can come of this. We all know it. We all plan to avoid it. Right after we've dated a personal trainer.

4. Dating the wrong person. This is the relationship that's destined to be mad, passionate and blessedly short-lived. Everybody knows it. Except, of course, the two people involved. It's the kind of romance that leaves you thinking either, "Gosh, that was fun." Or "What the heck was I thinking?" Or both.

We all hope to find a love that lasts. In the meantime, the good thing about a "not forever" love is that it's ... well, not forever. Which means there's only one way to handle it. Enjoy it entirely.

Worth mentioning

Remember ladies, keep your chin up, skirt down

Misbehaving celebrities and the recession have pushed more people to improve their etiquette in a bid to gain an edge over job rivals and inspired lifestyle books such as How to be a Heppburn in a Hilton World.

Author Jordan Christy said she wrote the guide to "the art of living with style, class and grace" after celebrities such as Paris Hilton, actress Lindsay Lohan and singer Britney Spears made headlines for all the wrong reasons.

Hilton is infamous for a lewd sex tape that became an Internet hit. Lohan has long been gossip fodder due to her public drunkenness, and Spears was splashed across tabloids partying without underwear.

"For too long this 'stupid girl' behaviour has been burning the daily headlines and I really think there's a lot of people out there who wanted to see a return to our feminine values," said the 24-year-old Nashville, Tenn.-based writer. Christy's book has chapters on Keep Your Chin Up and Your Skirt Down, Dress to Impress, and Let Him Come Calling.

Why no public transit to the airport?

InTransit

Brendan Van Alstine

metronews.ca/vanalstine

As I write this, I am sitting on a bus from the airport. Now hold on a second and don't get too excited when I say the airport — I don't mean the good ol' Edmonton International.

No, as I write this I'm sitting on the 98 B-Line from Airport Station in Richmond, B.C., riding into Vancouver proper. Which makes me wonder — why don't we have public transit to the airport in Edmonton?

OK, to its credit, Edmonton International Airport does provide the Sky Shuttle from downtown Edmonton. It sure beats the $60 cab ride, but at $10 for a one-way trip, it's still five times the price of transit. And even if you take advantage of the two-way fare discount, it's still triple what it would cost if the city provided actual public transit to the airport. I know when ETS announced the south LRT extension, there was some hubbub and speculation that it would eventually extend the train all the way to the International. However, since LRT is only able to achieve a maximum speed of about 80 km/h, it seems unlikely the city would invest in an airport extension.

Still, it seems that at least some form of public transit should be provided to our gateway to the rest of the world — I've talked to a number of people from out of town who think our lack of service to the airport is absolutely absurd, not to mention damaging to our reputation among international travellers.

What would make sense is a shuttle bus to the airport (since a bus could easily take advantage of the 110 km/h speed limit on the QE2), ideally interconnecting with the new south LRT.

So why aren't we doing this? Well, it's complicated, but the short answer is the airport is in Leduc County, not Edmonton and despite offering service to several other municipalities in the region, ETS is not officially a regional transit system.

Thankfully, though, after a half-century pissing match between various regional municipalities, and thanks to some bold moves on behalf of city council in the last few years, regional transit is finally starting to get some attention — so perhaps with a little luck we can all enjoy a nice affordable bus ride to the airport some time in the future.

5 things to do today to be green

TIPS Being green can be easier than you think.

1. Remove cellphone, iPod and laptop chargers from the wall when not charging. Chargers keep drawing electricity even if the device isn't charging.

2. There are environmentally responsible choices instead of bottled water such as the world's first carbon negative bottled water, Fiji Water. Recycle your empty bottles.

3. Use a compost bin to turn food waste into fertilizer for the garden.

4. Place recyclable shopping bags in car, desk and purse so there is no excuse to use plastic.

5. Repair leaky faucets. A dripping tap can waste 800 litres a month.

Mother Nature not frail old lady

EarthTones

Sophia Dore & Andrew Laursen

metronews.ca/earthtones

We talk a lot in this column about protecting the environment, about treading lightly on the Earth. This sometimes promotes a view of Mother Nature as a delicate, frail old lady who needs our constant care.

While this is true, we must not forget that the old dame still has some kick to her. We got some first-hand proof of the awesome power of nature this week.

This was not some epic event like a tornado or hurricane, just a simple summer thunderstorm.

This storm dumped 11 centimetres of rain onto our town in a couple of hours, flooding streets, basements and closing two major highways. People had to scramble out of their cars and seek higher ground. Major appliances in people's basements were moved to different rooms by the force of the water.

One sad thing was the impact of the massive volume of water on a local pond.

This pond was a beautiful place, home to many birds and fish. The flash flood washed out the debris dam at the foot of the pond and caused three-quarters of the water to drain out.

This pond contained huge snapping turtles thought to be about 80 years old. We hope they were able to resist being swept away but we fear they were not.

The scar caused by the water rushing out of the pond looks like something carved out by a major river or waterfall, not our usually stagnant pond.

What happened to the pond is a reminder not to take anything for granted. Nothing is forever.

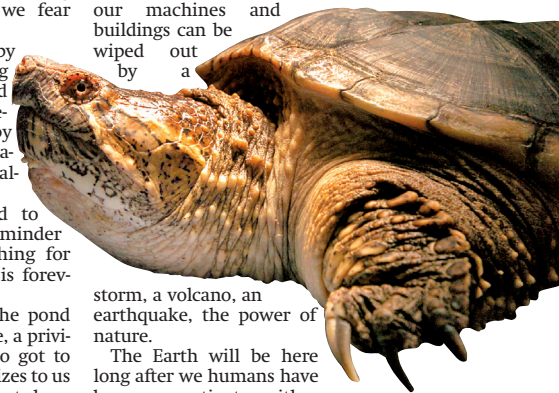

The beauty of the pond was a gift of nature, a privilege for those who got to enjoy it. It emphasizes to us that we are just guests here on Earth. Beings who have existed for just a blip in terms of geological time.

We think we humans are all-powerful and indeed we do have the power to do terrible things to our planet. But all we have built, all our machines and buildings can be wiped out by a storm, a volcano, an earthquake, the power of nature.

The Earth will be here long after we humans have become extinct, either through our own doing or from natural causes. Protecting the environment is not for the Earth, it is for us, so that we can live happy, healthy lives during our sojourn here.

Signs of economic recovery leading to more adventurous buys, says expert

Canadian investors are pumping money into small cap companies that they normally shun in uncertain times, enticed into riskier assets by signs the economy is stabilizing and by bargain prices.

The widely followed BMO Small Cap Index has raced ahead of other closely watched Canadian indexes as optimism over a global economic recovery has coaxed investors back into stocks hit especially hard by last fall's market meltdown.

It's a sign that market players are willing to be more adventurous again, experts say, with many investors believing the recovery is imminent.

Small cap refers to stocks with relatively lower market capitalization. The range of market capitalization for companies in the

Dismal jobs statistics fuel slide in Canadian dollar

RESULTS Canada's dollar finished lower versus the U.S. greenback Friday as weak jobs data soured investor risk appetite and briefly sent the currency to its lowest level in a week.

The slide followed a report that showed the Canadian economy shed 44,500 jobs in July, more than double the market forecast.

The report knocked the dollar as low as $1.0865 to the U.S. dollar, or 92.04 US cents, its lowest level since July 30. That was down from $1.0785 to the U.S. dollar, or 92.72 US cents,

The Canadian dollar closed at 92.40 cents US, down 0.48 of a cent on Friday. The U.S. dollar stood at $1.0823, up 0.56 of a cent.

shortly before the numbers came out.

The currency briefly recouped all those losses as investors returned to riskier assets when U.S. data showed employers cut fewer jobs in July than expected and the lowest number in any month since last August. REUTERS

Business in brief

JOBS Better-than-expected July U.S. jobs numbers have numerous private economists heralding the end of the recession, but the Obama administration is taking a more guarded view because of a worrisome rise in long-term unemployment and a drop in labour force participation. U.S. employers shed 247,000 jobs in July, far fewer than the 320,000 forecast and the 467,000 eliminated in June. The unemployment rate unexpectedly fell to 9.4 per cent from 9.5 per cent.

The company lost $146 million, most of it due to a $133.5-million non-cash writedown in the value of goodwill and the Brick

Group's brand. Sales plummeted 27.6 per cent to $556.1 million, while sales at stores open more than a year, considered a key measure of performance, fell a stunning 32.4 per cent. Much of that, Gregson said, is due to problems within the business. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Provincial money may decide fate of Montreal's MLS dream

It's Called Football

Ben Rycroft

Despite what thousands of screaming 12-year-olds will tell you, Cristiano Ronaldo's presence in Toronto was not the biggest soccer news being made this weekend.

Far be it from me to judge what constitutes proper soccer appreciation, but I'll just say that I felt for the fathers on this day. How comfortable can it be for a soccer dad to stand next to his darling daughter when said darling daughter has "take it off C. Ronaldo" scrawled on her stomach?

As I said, soccer is just starting to approach the mainstream, so far be it for me to judge what fills the stands. But for those who were not interested in seeing Ronaldo "take it off," the weekend's big news came when MLS commissioner Don Garber spoke to the media on possible expansion to Montreal.

He backed away from earlier statements in which he made it seem as though Montreal joining MLS in 2011 was a certainty, but stayed committed enough to the city to keep the tongues wagging.

"The next step for us is to work with them on trying to get public support to expand and renovate that stadium," Garber said.

"Without that, we're not going to be able to go (into Montreal)."

Just a week ago, Garber said Montreal would likely be the 19th team to join MLS and, with a clever choice of words, appeared to declare Canada would have a third team in MLS by 2011.

At best it was a vague statement. At worst, well, at worst sometimes people hear what they want to hear. Or, rather, people hear what Garber wants them to hear.

During the expansion process Garber had the habit of showing up in bid cities when they needed him the most and making outlandish statements like, "Ottawa is a favourite in the MLS race" and "Atlanta is a terrific soccer city."

In both cases it put pressure on the municipalities to get their stadium affairs in order.

back and forth between praise and ultimatum, but his words are meant to do nothing more than put pressure on la belle province to come through with the money.

If it does, Montreal will be on its way to MLS, likely in 2012.

If it doesn't, then Montreal becomes the next Ottawa and MLS moves on to another city willing to put up the money. After all, soccer dad and daughter have to stand somewhere.

Woods rules Firestone again

Tiger takes 7th win at Bridgestone

Tiger Woods won a record seventh WGC-Bridgestone Invitational title yesterday, overhauling Padraig Harrington with a sizzling burst of scoring before benefiting from a late collapse by the Irishman.

The American world No. 1 fired a five-under-par 65 on a breezy, humid day at Firestone Country Club to clinch his 70th PGA Tour victory, and fifth of the year, by four strokes.

Trailing playing partner Harrington by three overnight, Woods took control by covering the front nine in a spectacular five-under 30 on the way to a 12-under total of 268.

The Irishman regained a one-shot cushion with three holes remaining before his title bid unravelled with a triple-bogey at the par-five 16th after the duo had been put on the clock for slow play.

A closing 72 earned him a share of second place with Australian Robert Allenby (66).

Masters champion Angel Cabrera of Argentina signed off with a 67 to tie for fourth at seven under with American Hunter Mahan (66) in the elite World Golf Championships (WGC) event.

"I just knew that I had to get off to a quick start somehow and I was able to do that," Woods told reporters after sinking a six-foot birdie putt on the 18th green.

"But Paddy was just hanging in there, never made a mistake. He made a nice birdie at 11, then I made two mistakes at 13, 14. Paddy made a great par at 14 to take the lead. Until 16 it was just a great battle."

The title was decided in dramatic style at the 16th where Woods benefited from an extraordinary four-shot swing.

Diane Peters

Metronews.ca/oddjobs

Some say astrology is a blend of math, science, craft and intuition. But even Brandi Jasmine will tell you the horoscope you read in the paper or online is more like a wild guess.

That's because a person's true daily reading is determined not just by their sign, but the date and precise time of their birth. "They're accurate for about one-twelfth of the population," she says.

Jasmine, 45, composes the daily horoscopes on Astrology.ca — which she also syndicates out to web sites and print publications — by looking at the pie-shaped astrology chart for each day and noting the different "aspects" for each sign that are active that day.

Since she's been writing horoscopes for over a decade and has hundreds, she randomly picks one for an appropriate aspect and runs it that day.

Jasmine is more precise when she does a personal reading. After getting someone's birth details, she calls on a computer program to make up the chart. She then reads from the chart, a process that takes about an hour.

Here, she uses a mix of mathematical knowledge of what the planet's positions mean. But she's also very empathic, she says, so senses things from the person as well.

Jasmine was born in very devout Pentecostal B.C. family that had little tolerance for such things. She was known as "sensitive" growing up.

Only when she moved to Vancouver in her early 20s did Jasmine finally get in touch with her psychic side.

But it was overwhelming. She called her mother, telling her she was having powerful visions and dreams. Her mother insisted she come home immediately and go to church. The sermon, ironically, was on visions and dreams.

"I guess this must be OK with God," Jasmine thought. She returned to Vancouver and began readying up on tarot, horoscopes and astrology. She began doing readings, attending psychic fairs and getting to know others who shared the same gifts and interests.

She penned the self-published book Living with Your Psychic Gifts and found she enjoyed spreading the word about astrology and psychic vision as much as she liked using her gifts.

In the late 1990s, she moved to Toronto and started working for an Internet company. She started Astrology.ca and found she preferred doing her work online: She finds face-to-

Workology in brief

JOB LOSSES More than 45,000 Canadians lost their jobs in July, according to a Statistics Canada report — more than double what economists had predicted. Finance Minister Jim Flaherty says he expects more job losses in the coming months, but is optimistic about recovery in 2010. The majority of last month's job losses were in Quebec, with Saskatchewan, Newfoundland and Labrador following, while unemployment remained little changed in other provinces. Two sectors where gains were seen across the country were in the retail and wholesale trade.

INUIT CULTURE A new state-of-the-art cultural school is being built in Nunavut. The multi-million-dollar Inuit school, called Piquisilivivik, will provide a place where Inuit from across the northern territory can gather to preserve their culture, tradition and language through traditional skills training taught by Elders. The school, which is expected to open in 2011 and admit 26 students who are 18 and older and have the support of their community, has received $24-million in funding from the federal government. Tuition and living expenses for students will be paid by the territory, which has a population of 31,400.

JOBLESS RATE The unemployment rate for Canadian students hit an all-time high of 21 per cent in July. This summer has been the worst on record for student job seekers. Two sectors — hospitality and construction — that usually hire students during the summer, were hit particularly hard by the recession. This means that many students will return to college or university this fall with an oversized debt.

Director treated teens with respect

InFocus

Richard Crouse

metronews.ca/infocus

John Hughes wrote many lines that, in light of his untimely passing last Thursday at age 59, take on heightened meaning. Perhaps the most memorable comes from Ferris Bueller's Day Off. "Life moves pretty fast," says Ferris. "If you don't stop and look around once in a while, you could miss it."

By all reports Mr. Hughes did his best to "stop and look around," virtually retiring from public life in 1991 to spend more time with his wife of 39 years on their Wisconsin farm.

Although his last film as a director was 16 years ago his influence can still be felt today. Before Hughes, teen characters on film had only a passing resemblance to the real thing. There were the sanitized Disney kids, the goofy Beach Party crowd (who weren't actually teens) or the juvenile delinquents, bad girls or hot rodders of the '50s and '60s. Those movies were often a lot of fun, but none had the resonance of the teen life presented by Hughes.

His films like Sixteen Candles and Breakfast Club took teens seriously and didn't talk down to or exploit them. He understood that while many adults didn't take teen problems seriously, teens did. He knew having no date to the prom, or worse, the wrong date, could be devastating to the teen psyche and handled situations like that in a way that had never before been seen on film.

Ben Stein, who rose to fame as the deadpan teacher in Ferris Bueller, recognized the impact Hughes made. "He was the poet of the youth of America in the postwar period," he said, adding, "he was to them what Shakespeare was to the Elizabethan age."

Richard Crouse's Movie Show can be seen every Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on the E! Channel; mrcrouse33@hotmail.com.

Master of the mixtape

Director John Hughes was a modern day soundtrack guru

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

It's hard to find a soundtrack these days without a song from some up-and-coming indie band, but that wasn't the case twenty years ago. In the '80s movies often showcased big name pop acts, so when John Hughes included a song from a little known U.K. act in the opening scene of The Breakfast Club it made waves through the music and movie communities.

The song, Don't You Forget About Me, not only gave Simple Minds their first and only number one hit state-side, it transformed Hughes from a talented director to pop culture trend-setter.

"A lot of directors just threw in tunes because they sounded good, but Hughes chose songs that meant something to a scene or a character," says Michael Perlmutter, a Toronto-based music supervisor with Instant Entertainment. "He was one of the first modern day soundtrack gurus."

Ferris Bueller's Day Off, left, was just one of many films that director John Hughes, above, used to showcase new music.

Plenty of other bands also found success after appearing in a Hughes movie — The Smiths in Pretty in Pink, Yello in Ferris Bueller's Day Off to name two — but more importantly he is, arguably, responsible for making new wave the soundtrack to the '80s. "Hughes was breaking bands," says Corey Marr, a Toronto-based producer whose new film, Passenger Side, and its eclectic soundtrack, will make its Canadian debut at the Toronto International Film Festival in September.

Besides discovering new music, Hughes' ability to marry scenes with sounds was revolutionary in itself.

"For Hughes, the music and the movie were one and the same," says Marr. "Listening to one of his soundtracks was a logical extension to his movies."

"He found the right tunes for the right scenes and somehow captured the entire pulp culture in three and a half minute songs," adds Perlmutter.

While Hughes' movies and musical choices still have an enormous impact in pop culture today, a lot of directors haven't paid as much attention to their soundtracks as he did.

Marr says that movie scores are still record label marketing tools, but there are a few directors like Cameron Crowe, Quentin Tarantino and Wes Anderson who use the "John Hughes method" of creating soundtracks.

And that method, Hughes told MTV news in 1986, means a song "can't just be written apart and shoved in. It's got to come out of the action. It's got to talk about the characters, not the story, it has to augment that action."

Thirty-one years later, the basterds are back

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

When audiences filter in to their local theatres later this month to see Inglourious Basterds, the seventh film from art/trash flick architect Quentin Tarantino, most of them will be completely unaware of the movie's not-quite-Hollywood origins.

Tarantino based his epic Brad Pitt starring Second World War fantasy on a gritty, ultra violent 1978 Italian exploitation film called The Inglorious Basterds, directed by legendary eurotrash helmer Enzo Castellari and starring both ex-football hero Fred (The Hammer) Williamson and ex-pat Swedish actor Bo Svenson.

The original film — re-issued recently on blu-ray from Severin Entertainment — remains a cult classic of its kind and Svenson (who, along with Castellari, makes a cameo in Tarantino's redux) told Metro about why he thinks it still endures in counter culture circles.

"It's just a great, fun, eccentric action movie," says the now 68-year-old actor.

"Enzo was actually a wonderful director and unfortunately, very underrated. But Quentin told me he's been a fan of his work all his life and apparently he's not alone."

Svenson is perhaps best known as Joe Don Baker's successor essaying the role of vigilante sheriff Buford Pusser in the two sequels to the hit 1973 thriller Walking Tall (itself remade in 2004). But as far as his career choices are concerned, he does admit to some regrets.

"I screwed up," says Svenson, who also starred in Tarantino's Kill Bill films as a preacher.

"I was starring in real films like The Great Waldo Pepper with Robert Redford before Walking Tall and then, suddenly, I was a B-movie action hero."

"I went to Italy because the price they were offering was right but then, no one in Hollywood took me seriously anymore. Still, I am thankful for the niche I carved out for myself."

As far as Tarantino's loose remake is concerned, Svenson sees it as just another piece of the director's offbeat, absurdist cinematic puzzle.

"What Quentin is doing with this film is exploring the magical 'what if,'" he says. "Some might quibble that Hitler was never in Paris just to watch a movie, but how do we know he wasn't? You have to trust Quentin and just sit back, take his hand and let him take you on this wild, crazy, beautiful ride."

Let's be honest. No one going to see a movie based on a trailer that resembles Team America: World Police minus the satire should expect anything more than mild escapism.

But recent years movies like Iron Man have brought mild escapism to dazzling new heights and stiff special effects driven flicks like G.I. Joe: The Rise of Cobra look like a very expensive amateur hour in comparison.

The film is built around Duke (Channing Tatum) and Rip Cord (Marlon Wayans), a pair of American soldiers who become involved with an elite international team called G.I. Joe after their military convoy transporting experimental new weapons is hijacked by a group of terrorists called M.A.R.S. led by Duke's former flame (Sienna Miller).

Channing Tatum stars as Duke, the team leader of the elite G.I. Joe squad in G.I. Joe: The Rise of Cobra.

Granted provisional membership with the team, Duke, Rip Cord and the other Joes track Miller and her various M.A.R.S. cronies around the globe.

This is a ridiculous, if kind of fun film. While G.I. Joe sounds a little more grounded in reality than Transformers, this summer's other toy-based blockbuster, Tatum's monosyllabic delivery and Wayans' unfunny wisecracks do little to break up the constant stream of explosions and melodramatic "end of the world" situations.

Fans of the original comic and cartoon, essentially the base audience for a film like this, will be frustrated by how far director Stephen Sommers has strayed from the source material. And those unfamiliar with the characters will have to depend on a certain degree of suspension of disbelief to really enjoy the flick.

Box office

Following are the top 10 films at the North American box office for the three-day weekend beginning on Aug. 7, led by the new action movie G.I. Joe: The Rise of Cobra, according to studio estimates compiled on Sunday by Reuters.

- G.I. Joe: The Rise of Cobra: $56.2 million US
- Julie & Julia $20.1 million
- G-Force $9.8 million
- Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince: $8.9 million

Kara 'shocked' that Paula left Idol

INTERNAL POLITICS Kara DioGuardi is still shocked that Paula Abdul has quit American Idol after eight seasons, usmagazine.com reports.

"I can't get over it. I'm completely shocked," she said on Ryan Seacrest's radio show Friday. "It's such a loss for the show, such a loss for the contestants. She's definitely the heart of the panel."

"The kind of heart she treated the contestants with she treated me with last year," said DioGuardi, who added that she was "scared" joining the show last season. "She was so kind to me and made me feel immediately like part of the panel."

She added that she hopes Abdul "will reconsider" her decision to leave. DioGuardi shot down speculation that she was hired last season as an insurance policy against Abdul in case she leaves.

Abdul — who left show because she reportedly she didn't get her desired $20 million US deal — isn't sweating the fact that she is out of a job. "At this point, there are so many won-ing her feel attractive despite media scrutiny focused on her body.

She added: "Tony never ever places judgment. You can just relax and feel beautiful. He's just that type of person."

Director sticks up for LiLo

TRUE FRIENDS At least someone is willing to come to the defence of Lindsay Lohan.

Director Robert Rodriguez, who's working with Lohan for his next film, Machete, says the notoriously troublesome actress is being very professional.

"I already shot some great stuff with her."

She's fantastic," Rodriguez told Metro while promoting Shorts, his latest release. Rodriguez insists Lohan's previous work troubles are absent on this project.

Joan plays it safe at party

PARANOIA? Joan Rivers apparently has trouble trusting others. The comedy legend hosted a party at her swanky Upper East Side penthouse recently to celebrate her new TV show, How'd You Get So Rich?

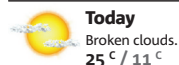

Aside from the show's producers and other assorted guests, Rivers reportedly hired three security guards to make sure no one made off with any of her valuables, according to Page Six. She's also trying to sell the apartment for $25 million US.

Metro Recipe of the Day

Eggplant Lasagna

INGREDIENTS:

2 tbsp (25 ml) olive oil
1 large onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tbsp (15 ml) Italian seasoning
2 cans (19 oz/540 ml each) diced tomatoes
1 can (28 oz/796 ml) tomato sauce
1 small eggplant (12 oz/375 g), peeled and cut into 1-in. (2.5-cm) pieces
1/4 tsp (5 ml) salt
1 container (16 oz/454 g) low-fat silken tofu, drained
2 large eggs
1 cup (250 ml) grated Parmesan cheese
9 no-boil lasagna noodles
2 cups (500 ml) shredded part-skim mozzarella cheese

METHOD:
1. Preheat oven to 400 F (200 C). Heat oil in large pot over medium-high heat. Add onion and cook until tender, 5 minutes. Add garlic and Italian seasoning and cook 1 minute. Add tomatoes and tomato sauce; bring to a simmer. Reduce heat to low and simmer until flavours are blended, 40 minutes.
2. Meanwhile, coat baking sheet with olive oil cooking spray. Add eggplant, coat with cooking spray and sprinkle with salt. Roast, turning occasionally, until browned, 30 minutes.

3. In food processor, combine tofu, eggs and Parmesan cheese; purée until smooth.
4. Coat 9 x 13-in. (3.5 l) baking dish with cooking spray. Spread 1 cup (250 ml) sauce on bottom of dish and arrange 3 lasagna noodles on top. Spread half of tofu filling over noodles, followed by half of eggplant. Top with 1-1/2 cups (375 ml) sauce and 1/2 cup (125 ml) mozzarella. Repeat with another layer, then top with remaining noodles, sauce and mozzarella.
5. Cover with foil and bake 1 hour. Remove foil and bake until heated through, about 15 minutes. Let cool slightly before serving.
